

Big shot in arm for small business

Mayor Bloomberg (l.) chats with employees of Hendrickson Custom Cabinetry in the South Bronx, after announcing that the Department of Small Business Services will award more than $4.2 million in funding to employers that have developed training programs to increase the skills and salaries of the working poor. The innovative program will provide funding directly to businesses that commit to job creation, promotion and training.